Weeklong multi-county Sheriff's Office DUI sweep yields 15 arrests

The Sheriff's Office is working and collaborating in several ways to attack the drunk and drugged driving problem.

Norristown, PA (December 12, 2016) – The holiday party season is in full swing, and Montgomery County Sheriff Sean P. Kilkenny has been working closely with other agencies to get drunk and drugged drivers off of the road. A weeklong multi-county crackdown on “Most Wanted” DUI offenders by sheriff's deputies has yielded 15 arrests. Eleven additional DUI offenders turned themselves in after hearing about the sweep.

The DUI-focused effort began on December 5, 2016 and targeted over 40 defendants from Montgomery, Bucks, Chester, Delaware and Philadelphia counties.

“We have a zero tolerance policy when it comes to drunk driving,” said Kilkenny. “We hope that the news of these sweeps will also serve as a deterrent to those who think they can get away with driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs.”

The Sheriff's Office Warrants Division works closely with Assistant District Attorney Douglas Lavenberg in developing the list of offenders to target, all of whom were repeat offenders or failed to show for court dates. Lavenberg said that keeping communities and streets safe by getting drunk drivers off of the road is a vital role that the District Attorney's Office plays.

Although Pennsylvania has toughened its laws by decreasing the legal limit of alcohol to .08 percent, DUI offenders stay on the road if they avoid court dates, probation or sentencing.

The District Attorney's Office is currently prosecuting more than 1,400 DUI cases, and the Sheriff's Office Warrants Division has over 900 DUI warrants on its books.

One of the benefits of working closely with the District Attorney's office is the expansion of extradition agreements with states outside of the tri-state area such as Florida, Colorado and Wisconsin. Fleeing the area is no longer an option to escape legal obligations or punishments.

Defendant Subodh Nair, whose job application in Florida was being held up due to his DUI warrant, flew back to Pennsylvania to turn himself into the Sheriff's Office.

“It’s sad to think that a fatality could have been prevented, but wasn’t,” said Kilkenny. “That’s why we are doing everything we can to address the problem of getting these wreckless drivers off of the road.”

The Sheriff’s Office has also been involved in community relations efforts to help raise awareness about the dangers of drunk driving. Sheriff’s deputies have been participating in a designated driver program created by Mothers Against Drunk Driving and the Philadelphia Eagles. They help educate fans about the dangers of drunk driving and the importance of designated drivers at home games.

The Sheriff’s Office partnership with MADD was also instrumental in the donation of two portable breathalyzers, which were donated by Pennsylvania State Trooper Kenton Iwaniec’s family. Iwaniec was killed, on his way home from his shift in March 2008, by a drunk driver. The breathalyzers are used to test offenders who are suspected of showing up drunk to DUI court hearings.

Supporting local police department DUI checkpoint efforts is another way that the Sheriff’s Office helps combat the drunk driving problem. Specially trained deputies process offenders who are brought into three different Montgomery County DUI processing centers, so that police officers can remain on the road.

“We receive a lot of appreciation from those police departments, because they may be short-staffed and unable to handle emergency calls without our backup on those nights,” Kilkenny said. “It’s great that we can help in several different ways to attack this problem.
