November 12, 2019 ILEE Interviewing Juveniles

The workshop discusses cognitive development, metacognition, emotional development, adolescent egocentrism, and sense of identity issues that greatly affect the juvenile interview. Another major factor in adult-juvenile interactions involves the impact of social media, differences in their views of privacy, and attention difficulties. The interview process presented factors in all these considerations and stresses rapport-building, empathy, developmental assessment, and interview strategy.

Topics include detecting deception, impact of substance abuse, mental health issues, handling anger, and dealing with denials of suspects. The process encompasses environment staging, rapport development, interview preparation, obtaining the narrative, active listening, and interpretation of juvenile words, terms, and meanings. Participants identify their strengths and weaknesses in juvenile interviewing by formulating, posing, and discussing appropriate interview questions.
